THE DIXIE DINNER.

How Rich Men Were Compelled to Pay for Extra Dishes.

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special]—An amusing scandal has arisen from the advertising dinner given to Henry E. Dixey, the burglar slayer, on the night before his departure for Europe. The secret society is confined to that small portion of society which lags over the stage on one side and fashionable life on the other, but it is intense nevertheless, and it serves to illustrate a curious phase of city experience in about-town circles. The Dixey banquet was announced in the advertising columns of the newspapers, and by press notice. The society is confined to the houses on the prairies and under the sidewalk-walks in their immediate vicinity. A little over a week ago a number of dynamite cartridges wrapped in a piece of red oilcloth were found under the sidewalk. Next day a boy on Quaid avenue found some ride cartridges, and two days after this another boy took to his mother for inspection some fifty rounds he had picked up on the prairie. Today some boys were playing ball on Robey street, near the old Chicago and Pacific or Bloomingdale track, when the ball went into a gutter under the sidewalk. The boy had to crawl under, and while looking for his ball, found a piece of gas pipe and reported more where that came from. It told its father and the police were notified. They found the hole under the sidewalk on the east side of Robey street and less than two feet south of the railroad track that a small hole had been scraped out. In this hole were 31 pieces of gas pipe 11 inches in diameter, and one to 10 inches long, wrapped in a piece of cloth. These were seven feet apart, and were made of dynamite, being packed with dynamite, being packed at the end with round blocks of wood. A fuse about eight inches in length was attached to each, and all ready for immediate use. The last piece of pipe was not loaded, but seemed to have been very recently cut, as the oil was still upon its end. In the hole was also found two boxes of dynamite weighing 100 pounds each. The fuse was cut, containing a large quantity of fuse, some waterproof and some cotton. The explosive outfit was taken to the Chicago avenue station. The gas pipe cartridges were exactly similar to those captured by Captain Schaeck in Louis Bling's house. It is believed the stuff was placed under the sidewalk by some anarchists who live in the neighborhood, and who perhaps their houses might be searched. It is evident the one placing it there desired to make it again, from the care with which it was wrapped up.

COMPLAINTS OF GENERAL CROOK.

At the war department the operations of General Crook against the Apaches are vigorously defended, but complaints continue to come.

They are not from the newspaper soldiers alone, for whom General Crook expressed high regard, but from citizens of the state who are as much interested as the general himself in the suppression of the murderous savages.

Head a gentleman from that territory say today that great indignation was felt at the carelessness of General Crook in allowing Germonio to slip from his custody, and especially in the savage and his entire band. The Indians who were taken were not disarmed, and pending the arrangement of final terms were treated more like guests than prisoners. Some of General Crook's former Indian scouts and guides have deserted and joined the bloody band which is still the terror of the border. General Crook is the author of the massacre.

It is said that $100,000 would be gladly given by the people of New Mexico for the extermination of this savage and his handful of followers. General Crook missed the opportunity of his life when he failed to either hold Germonio or shoot him and his ferocious outlaws.

GENERAL CROOK'S EXPLANATION.

He Spoke Hurriedly, and Did Not Know What He Was Saying.

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special]—Owing to the many and diverse accounts of the circumstances of the famous utterance, "Run, Romani and Rebellion," by the Rev. Dr. Samuel D. Burchard, it seemed to your correspondent desirable to obtain the undoubted facts of the case himself. He accordingly used the merits of the language, but he did not make any statement concerning it. Investigation indicated that there was no boudoir, after all, for anybody to pocket. Less than half the diners paid the price, while the rest got the banquet gratis. The deadheads were the personal associates of Dixey, and the scheme was to make the rich fellows pay enough to cover the cost of the caterer. But this explanation only answers the victims of the practical joke instead of mollifying them, and there is hubbub in the saloons and lobbies of upper Broadway.

ANARCHISTS ARRESTED.

ST. LOUIS, May 23.—F. H. Bergemann, Martin Frank, Otto Fricke and Gotlieb Juborosky, for whom warrants were issued yesterday, were arrested today and will be held to await trial on the charge of having introduced and urged the adoption of an unlawful assembly, resolutions endorsing the actions of the anarchists during the Haymarket riot in Chicago. It had been alleged previous to their arrest by the detective force working on the case, that the men had been conniving with the whereabouts of the noted Chicago agitator Parsons, than they cared to reveal. This detective states that he knows positively that Parsons passed through a small town in northern Kansas soon after the riot, with the intention of escaping to Canada, but was obliged to change his course on account of the serious delay he suffered by the washouts on the railroads, and started for the south, passing through this city on his way and conferring with his brethren while here. If this should prove to be the truth of the matter the arrests made here to-day are important, and tends to substantiate the statement telegraphed from Florida that Parsons had been seen there, presumably on his way to Cuba.

A LUDICROUS BOYCOTT.

Which Amused New York for a Season—A Historical House.

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special]—A ludicrous boycott is over. Oliver Hitchcock's coffee and cake salon is thronged again after a week of lonesomeness. This is a richly established in the days when literary bohemianism was an interesting element in New York journalism, and George Arnold, Artemis Ward, and M. G. Sheppard, and other members of genuine, preferred dilettante and catch-fare to work and comfort, Hitchcock's restaurant was their favorite eating house at night. Ten cents would buy a cup of good coffee and three biscuits hot from a griddle, and a dime more would bring a plate of pork or corned beef beans, white pie and crullers were correspondingly cheap. The strike of employees on the Third avenue railroad is over, so far as the running of cars is concerned, the place of baying having been filled, but the receipts of the saloons are correspondingly less, and the manager is correspondingly cheap. SUNDAY IN MACON.

HAPPENINGS OF A HOT DAY IN THE CENTRAL CITY.

Attempted Suicide—Macon and Dublin Railroad—Rose Park—The Sunday Schools—The Gardens—Dork and Dashed and News Notes of Interest About the Central City.

MACON, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—Late yesterday evening Charles H. Russell left his store and walked a few doors up the street to Happy Mike's barber shop, on Cotton avenue. As if meditating, he stood before a large mirror for a few moments, and then, in aching a razor, he cut a deep gash across his left wrist. He then sat down and held the bleeding arm until he fainted from loss of blood. Some one discovered his condition and sent for Mike, who, upon arrival, was met by Dr. T. J. McAfferty, who is an expert from his store and called a physician. Dr. W. Chester quickly responded and dressed the wound in a proper manner. Later he rallied and talked of the deed.

He said that he was not treated well at home, and had not long to stay in this world. He will probably come around all right later on. This is the third attempt this week, besides one dead which was probably suicide. It seems that the means of suicide do not give place to an epidemic of fits of despair. It would be a very good idea to give some restraint upon those whose attempts fail for they are so ready to take their own lives, they might not hesitate to take the lives of others if an opportunity offered. It certainly argues a diseased condition of the mind.

The Macon and Dublin Railroad.

MACON, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—Your correspondent, Colonel Myrick, of the firm of Bowens & Myrick, on the street yesterday, and he gave THE CONSTITUTION some points about the progress of the Dublin and Macon railroad. The road from Dublin to Gallia's mills was graded, to start with, and beginning at the mills, Messrs. Bowens & Myrick have brought the road six miles beyond Jeffersonville, and are heading for Macon. They are now in full labor. They are only fifteen miles from Macon, now, and they hope to get here by the middle of August. That portion near Macon has not been precisely located yet, but will be done time enough so as not to delay the work of grading. It is hoped that the road will be ready for the transportation of the crops now growing.

Rose Park Improved.

MACON, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—That energetic and public-spirited individual, Colonel E. D. Irvine, has extended an invitation to the attaches of this branch of THE CONSTITUTION to be on hand at the formal opening of Rose park, which will occur at an early day. The park was donated by the late Simri Rose, many years ago, and is a beautiful plot of ground near Mount DeSoto academy. Colonel Irvine has been having it improved, and will be a benefit to the city and the children. A mound of stone capped with a piece of statuary, a summer house and fountain, music and iron safety swings, will make it attractive alike to young and old. At the formal opening the festivities will be arranged on an attractive plan, and the colonel promises us lemonade with real lemon in it, cake, etc. The place will be a monument alike to the donor and the generous, whole-souled individual who has planned and supervised its improvement.

Sunday Schools.

MACON, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—White dresses and Japanese fans were very prevalent on our shady streets today. Macon's little people are very faithful in attending Sabbath school services. Besides the various schools already organized, the Christian church has issued a call for all those not already attending schools, to assemble at their place of meeting on Sunday, and help them to organize a school. This denomination uses the same series of Union lesson papers as the others, and neither creed or sect is known in their teaching.

In the city and suburbs there must be a dozen or fifteen schools, with a large attendance at each. The new school lately established at the Episcopal church in East Macon has now a large attendance and is doing well.

Dots and Dashes.

MACON, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—Judge Simons is reported as being quite ill at Cumberland. The rumor has caused much anxiety among his friends.

Judge Allen Fort, of Americus, will preside in Bibb superior court this week. Judge Fort during his judicial career has won golden opinions from all.

Dumby Lee, the crippled negro, is again in disgrace. Dumby will get on a tare, and the result is trouble for Dumby.

The eligible candidates will soon be on the rampage. Several names have been spoken of in that connection.

Cubbers have fallen from five cents a piece to two for a nickel. This is placing a premium on stamp collecting.

The gardens are panning out really handsome since the price of the dress has been broken.

Little Willie Paxton died at Mr. Clegg's house in East Macon, to-day. He was here attending school. His father lives in Thomas county.

HOME AT WORK.

The Progress of a Remarkable Religious Revival.

ROMA, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—Rome is on a building boom. New houses, stores, office & light have commenced the erection of three splendid two story brick store houses. Colonel C. D. Forsyth is building a fine two story brick store house, and Messrs. Battay & Hamilton have torn down their old building, preparatory to the erection of a fine two story brick building. All three are on Broad street. Messrs. Roundville & Bro. have purchased an eligible lot on the corner of Howard and Franklin streets, and will shortly erect a commodious three story brick building. Mr. Jack King has the plans and specifications for a handsome residence on Howard street. In fact Rome, Mr. Martin Graham and Mr. Tanner are building neat residences. Other valuable improvements are contemplated, and altogether the outlook is promising.

Rome is in the midst of the most remarkable revival experienced in her history. It commenced about two weeks ago and has continued to increase. The Rev. Dr. T. R. Keady, the popular pastor of the Methodist church, whose heart is in the movement. He urged Dr. Leffewich, of Nashville, to come and assist him, and the doctor finally consented. Among the features of the reviv is the singing of Mrs. Richards, nee Miss Stiff, who was for a time a member of the faculty of Shorter college. Mrs. Richards has a fine voice and uses it to splendid advantage. These services are held daily, in the morning, in the afternoon and at night. These services are attended by immense congregations. The Rev. Mr. Jackson, of the Jackson Revival.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—The religious services at the Methodist church are still being continued, and are growing in interest every day. Rev. Mr. T. R. Keady, the pastor, is being assisted by Rev. B. H. Sasseen, of Jackson. The meeting to be continued on through next week, or longer.

For Trifling with a Registered Letter.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—Duncan McLean, assistant postmaster at Ferndale, Coffey county, was bound over by the United States commissioner Saturday evening in the sum of $500 to answer the charge of taking a registered letter from the mail in March, 1885.

T. O. and M. T. Asheville, N.C.; Sub fresh places given to the following young men: Beding, Hayden, Landrum, Mutual Phillips, Talafaro, Webb, White, Wren. The names of those were given in the following order: Davis McLoud, Stevens, Britton, C. E. Faillio, C. P. and G. P. Griffin, Georgia; W. W. Stevens, Keene Alpha, and W. W. Georgia; J. P. Stewart, A. T. O. and Few, Griffin, Georgia; W. P. Thomas, F. D. T. and P. G. Ukihi, California; B. W. Trimble, P. D. T. and P. G. Hogansville, Georgia.

The time for the champion debate has been changed from Monday night to Monday afternoon. The question "Should there be a commission established to inquire into the relation between labor and capital in the United States," will be discussed on that occasion. The Fewes have the affirmative.

JUSTICE IN LIBERTY.

A Long Session of the Superior Court to be Held.

HINERVILLE, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—The superior court has been in session since Monday, the 17th instant. Judge Merlehan is presiding, and the following names have been called: Colonel R. E. Lester, W. W. Fraser, Colonel Basinger, W. C. Clinton, P. W. Meldrum, of Savannah; Colonel Beasley, of Reidsville, and Messrs. May and Harden of the local bar. A considerable amount of business has already been transacted, and there is a prospect of a very lengthy term. One party has been convicted of cow stealing and sent to the penitentiary for three years. Another convicted of shooting at a party and sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary. One Kicklighter charged with murder was acquitted and another party, Carnichael by name, charged with the same offense, had his case put off for lack of sufficient counsel. The grand jury reported the county clear of debt and a few thousand dollars in the treasury. Our public roads, public buildings, etc., are in good order. Judge Merlehan made many friendly acquaintances in this little village since his arrival on this trip, and some persons here think that he will represent the first district in congress very nicely.

TO BE REBUILT.

The Material Development of Dalton—New Ventures.

DALTON, Ga., May 22.—[Special.]—The Cherokee manufacturing company, recently burned, will be rebuilt at once, with a capital of $20,000. Our business men, in earnest when they speak of such enterprises, and also determined to effect such success as the managers of the Augusta and Chattanooga railroad cannot afford to overlook. They want the road to come here and we must have it.

The stock company, composed of F. T. Hardwick, D. K. McKamy, J. B. Gudger and R. M. Heron, are excavating for the new opera-house, and before six months Dalton will have as nice a opera house as any town in Georgia. No pains nor money will be spared to make it.

A Week of Thieves.

FOUR VILLAGE, Ga., May 22.—[Special.]—Mrs. T. J. Gentry's house was burglarized one night this week of all the provisions it contained. The loss was small, and no clue to the thief. A mule was stolen from Major George Jones, on Thursday night. Neither mule nor thief has been captured. It is a heavy loss on Major Jones. Last night a thief entered the pantry and dining-room of Mrs. Royal by means of a false key, and stole the table cloth, all the plates, glasses, pieces of silver, and other minor articles, but left no trace to identify him.

Efforts are being made to catch the perpetrators of these fiendish acts. Messrs. Somer Bros. caught a colored shoplifter this week with a fine fan. She was tried before Justice Brannah and committed to jail.

Mr. Blane in Buchanan.

BUCHANAN, Ga., May 22.—[Special.]—Major J. Blane, candidate for the democratic nomination for Congress, spoke in a crowded house here Friday. He indicated that if elected he would make a good representative at the start. That six years service would not be required to fit him for the place.

He discussed the tariff, civil service and silver questions, and insisted that the tariff should be modified, that we should have more money and that the civil service law should be repealed.

The speech was interspersed with funny anecdotes characteristic of the major and was well received.

Heavy Suit for Foreclosure.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—A bill in equity has been filed in the United States circuit court by Samuel A. Strong and James J. Goodwin, trustees for the holders of the second mortgage bonds of the Macon and Brunswick, the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad and the Central trust company of New York, for a foreclosure mortgage to recover $1,100,000 principal, with interest thereon since 1871. The suit promises to be very interesting, and the hearing will probably be had during the week.

Murdered His Wife.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—The account of a brutal murder in the eastern part of the county has just reached here. Frank Coleman, a negro living at Boston, twelve miles east of this place, knocked his wife down with a razor. The woman died shortly after, and the murderer has so far made his escape. Our vigilant officers are on the lookout for him, and the chances are that Frank will soon be caught.

Shot in the Nose.

MONTEZUMA, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—Mr. H. M. Rakeley a young man about twenty-five years of age, with a family consisting of a wife and one child, residing some six miles from town, was shot in the nose with a pistol on Friday, inflicting an ugly but not dangerous wound. He had just come from this place and was under the influence of whisky. Whether done with suicidal intent or accidentally is not known.

The Success of the Chatham Centennial.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—The Chatham Artillery centennial committee last night had a meeting to wind up the affairs of the late centennial.

The total amount of money raised was brought about by Dr. T. R. Keady, the popular pastor of the Methodist church, whose heart is in the movement. He urged Dr. Leffewich, of Nashville, to come and assist him, and the doctor finally consented.

Manufacturing Relics.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 23.—[Special.]—Mr. Lewis Trope, one of Crawfordville's oldest citizens, has capped the climax in the way of making relics for his children. Years ago he planted a China-berg and when the tree was about ten years old, he replanted it. It grew to be large enough to make lumber, and Mr. Trope had it sawed up into lumber ten years ago. He is now making up this lumber into bureaus and center tables for his children.

We call him Tornado Tommy."

Speaker was a middle-aged countryman, as holding a little boy by the hand, and was about the youngster to a friend in the room at the depot.

"Tornado Tommy! It struck me as a very remarkable name, and I made up my mind to see if it was still in use with him. In the few moments the gentleman was here, his friend had taken his departure, and the child was amusing himself looking out of the window. Taking advantage of the opportunity, I entered into conversation with the stranger, and made some pleasant remark about the boy we may surprise our new acquaintance did not realize.

"Our little son is a bright little fellow," I replied, "what's his name?"

"Tommy," was the hesitating response, "the fact is, I know whether the child has a mother. You see, he is not my son. He was just thrown upon a mysterious way, and I am trying to do my best for him."

"I say, do you call him Tornado Tommy?"

"I explain that," said the stranger with a smile, "you will have the whole story. I don't tell all the rule, where I am not known, but as you asked the question, I will give you the whole in Harris county, the home of the cyclone, called. You will remember that our company had more than its share of whirlwinds, tornadoes and cyclones during the past ten or twelve years."

"I need my head."

"About three years ago," continued the speaker, "I was living alone on my farm, my wife gone to Alabama on a visit. One afternoon I was down at the spring about two hundred yards back of my house, when suddenly I heard the sound like the rumbling of a freight train, and I saw a funnel-shaped cloud rising from the hill on the other side of my farm, and moving in my direction. As black as night, with clouds of smoke emanating from it, it was a fearful looking thing, and I say to myself as I looked at it. The spring was a little hollow under a huge rock, and as the funnel came over the only shelter within reach, I threw down, hugging the ground like a good fellow, I seemed to me that it was all over in a moment."

"I heard an awful roar. The ground under me. Liquid streaks zig-zagged, expectation, and then came the patterning of a peltill."

"To my feet and looked about me. I hardly saw anything. Absolutely nothing was left of the scene. Except the floor and underpinning. Even the chimneys were gone. There was not a fence anywhere. The tornado had gained a hundred feet wide, and in this track had been torn up and whirled away or splintered as fine as wooden toothpicks. Grass appeared to have been shaved close to the lawn. Walking up to the top of the hill, and that my plantation was a total wreck, the mounds of the desolation around me still held jubilant. My family escaped, and I was safe and sound. After such a good cause to rejoice. In short time my friends came over to see the wreckage assistance. The bronx vague loss of life and property all over the company we were quite silent, viewing the storm, I thought that I heard a foolish shriek near where my front gate had few hours before. The shriek had been down and lay perfectly flat in a tangled Approaching the spot from which the cry proceeded, I was almost paralyzed to see men in the bushes a little child, apparently more than two years old."

"Getting up my friends with a shout, we picked little fellow. To our surprise he was alive, but not a scratch. He laughed merrily, but not understanding. We asked his name repeatedly and always said something like 'Tommy'—supposed that he was the same neighbor, and that he had been in some mysterious fashion, or that lost his way. We were confident that by day his parents would turn up anxious to reclaim him. One of our crew suggested that Tornado Tommy would be a good name, and we all thought it the very thing: getting late and I took

"Tommy in my arms to a house to spend the night. Here was completely perplexed. After putting the child to bed his wife came to me and said that the child could not be one of our Harris sons. His little frock was made of a peculiar material used in those parts. There were no marks of clothing. His dark face and bright black hair foreign look, and his baby jargon was still. Still I hoped to hear something in the next day."

"Getting up my friends with a shout, we picked everybody came to see the boy. It was never got the slightest clue to his identity. My wife came home and took quite a fancy to the little waif. We adopted him, and believed that there is not a finer boy in the world Tornado Tommy."

"You really believe," I said, "that he came from the tornado that struck him?"

GORDON'S PROGRESS.

THE PEOPLE STILL SPEAKING OUT FOR PRIMARIES.

The Description of an Average Courthouse Meeting—Newspapers Coming Out for Gordon—Colonel D. Pike Hill Recalls the Scenes of 1865—The Augusta Indignity Again, Etc.

The following description of a courthouse meeting, from the Hampton Enterprise, is well worth reading:

Colonel A. sees Colonel B. and Colonel C. in the town, make out resolutions to suit the idea to be followed. They call a meeting of a committee of wise men. The Master of Ceremonies is R. E. Lee. Who, when the din of waging warfare was nominally closed, stood by the people of Georgia against the invading forces of Bullock, and again against the Federal invaders, who were in such opposition—and that, at a time when less courageous ones sought the safety and quietude of their homes. The Master of Ceremonies, who was a native, raised his eloquent voice in behalf of the liberation of his people of the southland, and never lowered his mighty arms of freedom. His people were free, and were granted the rights of freemen, who by his business and financial influence, after he had given up his seat in the Senate, became a Georgia Pacific railroad, the best railroad for the people in the state of Georgia—which has reduced the price of coal and staple commodity one-half; who have given up their slaves, and are now ready to go to town attend the meeting. The colonels call the meeting in the courthouse. By preconcerted arrangement the resolutions are handed to a delegate from each county. The country delegate is asked to move the adoption of one from another county to send a country delegate to another county to be chosen. Another country delegate goes to nominate one to be chosen. And so on.

"I believe she was the most beautiful woman I ever saw—no offense to present company, and she was as high spirited as pretty.

"I received but imperfect reports as to the character of Cosmo Rolshoven; but he was a very fine looking man, with something of the reckless, dare-devil in his countenance.

"Morgan was altogether different; he was rather plain as to his features, but intelligent looking and very well informed.

"To conclude, he bore the best sort of character among his neighbors, while Rolshoven was admired more than liked.
